The Chicago Athenaeum: Museum of Architecture and Design and The European Centre for Architecture Art Design and Urban Studies are pleased to inform you that the following has won a 2013 GOOD DESIGN™ Award:

• Tennant T12 Floor Scrubber, 2011-2013

Founded in Chicago in 1950, GOOD DESIGN remains the oldest and the world's most recognized program for design excellence worldwide.

For 2013, the Museum received submissions from several thousand of the world's leading manufacturers and industrial and graphic design firms from around the world representing the most important and critical mass of influential corporations worldwide in the design industry from over 48 countries.

In November, the jury met in Chicago and selected over 700 product designs and graphics from over 38 nations worthy of the GOOD DESIGN Award for their Design Excellence.

All awards and winners will be posted mid-December on the Museum's website at chi-athenaeum.org.

All award winning products and graphic designs are published in the GOOD DESIGN Yearbook for 2013-2014. (Please see attached form.)

You may announce the 2013 GOOD DESIGN Awards in your press, promotion, and marketing materials.

If your firm would like to use the Museum's GOOD DESIGN Logo in connection with this product and its award for your marketing, advertising, literature, and promotion materials, you may do so by entering into a licensing agreement with the Museum. This year, the Museum is also offering a five-year license for extended use. Please see attached form for details.

Again, congratulations for receiving the Museum's prestigious GOOD DESIGN Award for 2013.

The deadline for GOOD DESIGN 2014 is May 15, 2014.

Sincerely,

Christian K. Narkiewicz-Laine
